THE TOWN'S ELECTRIC SERVICE.

To the Editor of The Express,—

Sir,—I have been asked by a number of people to give my views on the change of rates proposed by the Hydro Electric Commission.

We have recently had an example of the trouble which may ensue from the town council taking action in legal matters without consulting the town solicitor. I refer to the Street Watering By-Law.

Any change affecting the existing agreement for electric service is of so much greater importance than any ordinary by-law that it appears to me beyond question that the first duty of the council is to refer the proposition and all that it involves to their solicitor. I am assured that he will readily give the council, and through them the citizens, the benefit of his opinion and counsel. His previous knowledge of the existing contract with the Seymour Power Company will afford a material advantage in his consideration of the matter.

Personally, until I have such counsel, either from the town solicitor, or some other competent legal adviser, I will not accept any proposition, no matter how favorable it may appear, and especially will I decline to sign the contract which is presented to all customers for their signature, and the acceptance of which is made obligatory upon all new applicants for service, or connection is refused.

Pending legal counsel it is not my intention to discuss in detail either the proposed rates or the service contract. I am assured that the new schedule means a reduction in rates. Probably that is so in many cases, but I am assured that it means an increase in present charges to not a few. The "joker" is in the contract. I venture the assertion that not five people in the town, outside the employees of the Hydro Electric Commission, can read the proposed contract and understand it, or the obligations accepted in signing it. Writ-from every restriction. To remove every possible chance which a user might have under the town contract, the Hydro service contract provides that any disagreement shall be referred to the Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario (the chief party to the contract) whose decision shall be final. It appears to me that any person who would sign such a jug-handled agreement should be placed in charge of a guardian.

The user who is looking only to a reduction in rates (in most cases very small) will fail to find in the schedule of proposed rates all that he expects. For instance, that much discussed Ethiopian of electric contracts, Mr. Peak Load, is there ingeniously disguised and as innocent looking as a cat near a jug of cream. He may be as innocent as he looks but for myself I prefer his elimination. There are many other charges, obligations and restrictions in direct contravention of the agreement between the Seymour Power Company and the town, which agreement was approved by the rate-payers.

A great many people ask why the present determination by the Commission to force a change practically abrogating the existing agreement, without consulting either the council, the users of the service, or the rate-payers by whom the contract was made and whose rights it protects. Possibly there is another Ethiopian just here, but I think the public will be best served if the hunting out of this chap is left to the solicitor.

I don't want to be understood as criticizing the Provincial Government or the chairman of the Hydro Electric Commission in this connection. The government purchased the assets of the Seymour Power Company and by Act of the Legislature assumed liability for all existing contracts. So far they have lived up to this obligation—witness the payment of municipal taxes for 1916.

The Chairman of the Hydro Electric Commission has also declared his intention of carrying out all existing contracts, and notwithstanding the changes now proposed with objectionable features it is probable that if his personal attention was called to the matter he would unhesitatingly abide by the town contract and possibly, I might say probably, would give his Napanee patrons the advantage of the reduction in rates without increases which are contrary to the provisions of the contract, or individual concessions previously made. No doubt the council will see the propriety of giving the head of the Commission this opportunity.

It is unnecessary, and would be presumptuous on my part, to enumerate the points upon which the solicitor should be asked for advice and instructions. For the present I think I have gone as far as I should unless a controversy should arise regarding the matter.

In the meantime the rights of the town, of electric users, and of the the points upon which the solicitor should be asked for advice and instructions. For the present I think I have gone as far as I should unless a controversy should arise regarding the matter.

In the meantime the rights of the town, of electric users, and of the ratepayers should not be jeopardized by any hasty action until we have the advice of skilled counsel. The reduction in charges is really the smallest of the interests involved and the minor consideration should not dazzle or blind anyone to much larger issues at stake.

NEW SENATORS NAMED

Government Fills Half the Upper House Vacancies.

Gideon D. Robertson, Who Did Excellent Work in Settling the Dispute Between the Canadian Pacific Railway and Its Telegraphers Has His Services to the Country Recognized.

OTTAWA, Jan. 23.—Seven of the 14 vacant Senatorships were filled by the Government on Saturday, four in Ontario and three in the Maritime Provinces. The new members of the Upper Chamber are Messrs. Harry W. Richardson, of Kingston; Gideon D. Robertson, of Welland; Mr. George Lynch-Staunton, of Hamilton; Colonel Frederic Nicholls, of Toronto; Mr. Charles E.
Tanner, leader of the Conservative Opposition in Nova Scotia; Mr. Adam
B. Crosby, of Halifax, and Dr. F. J.
Bourque, of Richibucto, who is New Brunswick's representative.

The remaining vacancies will probably be filled in the course of the next two weeks. Saturday's list includes no members of Parliament, but it is expected that some of the Commoners will be promoted to the Upper House when the rest of the Senatorships are filled. In connection with the appointment of Mr.
Robertson, of Welland, who was a prominent figure in the settlement of the dispute between the Canadian Pacific Railway and its telegraphers recently, the statement is made that it is an earnest of what may be expected to be done for labor in later Senatorial appointments.

Colonel Frederic Nicholls, of Toronto, one of the Ontario group of new Senators, is a man of great and varied business experience, who has for years taken a deep interest as well in all public questions. Mr.
Harry Richardson is also a well known business man and has been specially associated with the export trade in grain.

Mr. Geo. Lynch-Staunton is a prominent member of the Ontario Bar, and is well known throughout Ontario as a public speaker. Mr. Gideon Robertson is a prominent member of the order of Railway Telegraphers. Recently his good offices were placed at the service of both parties in a serious dispute between the C.P.R. and its telegraphers, both parties to the controversy afterwards assuring the Government that Mr.
Robertson's services in this regard were exceedingly valuable and aided greatly in the settlement which was eventually reached.

Mr. Charles E. Tanner has had a long experience in public life and was for more than ten years leader of the Conservative party in Nova Scotia. Mr. A. B. Crosby, although at present of Halifax, was a native and former resident of Cape Breton and it is understood will shortly resume his residence in that section which he now represents in the Senate. He is a former member of the Commons.

PRESIDENT WILSON TALKS.

Makes Startling Move Looking Towards Peace.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Whether the United States shall enter a world's peace league, and, as many contend, thereby abandon its traditional policy of isolation and no entangling alliances, was laid squarely before Congress and the country today by President Wilson in a personal address to the Senate. For the first time in more than a hundred years a President of the United States appeared in the Senate chamber to discuss the nation's foreign relations after the manner of Washington, Adams and Madison.

While the President was speaking copies of his address had been forwarded to American diplomats in all the belligerent countries for the information of the Foreign Offices, and were being prepared for representatives of neutral Governments here.
Back of the fundamental proposal for some sort of international sanction for preservation of the future peace of the world, now already accepted in principle by both sets of belligerents in their replies to President Wilson's peace note, lies the possibility, which the President today openly expressed, that thereby may be laid the ground work upon which an approach may be made to an end of the present conflict.

Here are briefly the terms which President Wilson laid down:

- (1) That the peace must be a peace without victory, that it must be a peace agreed to by "equals," and not dictated by victors.
- (2) That it shall make no effort to draw distinctions between the rights of big and small nations.
- (3) That it shall be a peace based on the principle that all Governments derive their authority from the consent of the governed. That it shall abandon the idea that big nations have the right to dispose of small nations. That it shall recognize among other things a free and united Poland.
- (4) That all nations of Europe shall be accorded free outlets to the seas.
- (5) That the treaty of peace shall recognize in theory and in fact the principle of the absolute freedom of the seas.
- (6) That the peace shall look to the limitation of naval and military armaments, and shall make possible an abandonment of the movements for military preparedness.
- (7) That the peace shall recognize a new and broader form of the Monroe doctrine, namely, that no nation has the right to force its form of TORONTO, Jan. 23.—Controller Thomas Foster, who recently won his libel action against The Toronto World and was awarded $1,000 damages, decided to give the money to Mrs. Phoebe Lancaster, of 242 Atlas avenue, Fairbank, the widow of Private Lancaster, who was killed in action at the front. At the time Private Lancaster enlisted he and his wife were residing at 224 Vaughan road, just outside the city limits, his name was included in the list of soldiers which the city insured with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, but when it was discovered he was a non-resident, the policy was canceled. It was not until after the death of Private Lancaster that his widow learned that he was not insured. Lancaster had told his wife that if anything happened to him she would receive $1,000 from the city, consequently she was bitterly disappointed when told he was not insured and that she had no claim on the city. Later Mrs. Lancaster entered an action against the city, and the Metropolitan Life to recover the money, but the case was dismissed. Mr. Justice Kelly, who heard the case last month, ruled against her claim.

Controller Foster knew all the facts of the case and that it was a particularly hard one, hence his decision to give Mrs. Lancaster the money awarded him by the courts.

Neutral Sailors Held.

BERLIN, Jan. 23.—A summary of the German Admiralty's official statement on the detention, as prisoners of war, of neutral sailors aboard armed merchantmen captured by the German naval forces was cabled to the State Department at Washington by Ambassador Gerard Saturday evening. This is the only information yet available regarding this development in naval procedure. German official circles profess to regard the case as affording an opportunity for negotiations looking to the settlement between America and Germany of the status of armed merchantmen.

Since the issuing of the German memorandum on armed merchantmen earlier in the war, German authorities have held that a ship which mounts guns, whether they be intended for defence or offence, loses its status as a private commercial craft and becomes a warship. Sailors taking service on such a ship, these authorities contend, lose their neutral status, just as if they had enlisted in the naval forces of a belligerent. Therefore, these sailors are liable to treatment as prisoners of war.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

PLOTTED AGAINST CANADA.

German Consul - General Given a Heavy Sentence.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22.—For the first time in the history of the United States a foreign Consul-General, Franz Bopp, one of three Consuls-General of Germany in this country, was sentenced Monday to prison and payment of a fine for violation of American neutrality. Judge William H. Hunt in the United States District Court sentenced Bopp to two years in the Federal prison at McNeils Island, Wash., one year in the county jail, and assessed an aggregate fine of $10,000 against him, the prison and jail terms to run concurrently.

Three of Bopp's aides, Vice-Consul E. H. von Schack, Lieut. George Wilhelm von Brincken, and C. C. Crowley, a wartime secret agent, received like sentences. Mrs. Margaret W. Cornell, Crowley's Secretary, was given concurrent prison and jail sentences of one year and one day and of one year without fines.

Bopp and the four others were convicted by a Federal jury on January 11 of conspiring to violate American neutrality by setting afoot a military enterprise against Canada in aid of Germany and of conspiring to violate the Sherman law by dynamiting munition ships in interstate commerce. The first is a felony for which all, except Mrs. Cornell, received the maximum prison sentence. The second is a misdemeanor, and the defendants, except Mrs. Cornell, received the maximum sentence. Mrs. Cornell escaped the $5,000 fine.

Larger Atlantic Fleet.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Six large submarines, four British and two Italian, together with the 14,000-ton British armored cruiser Leviathan, have recently been added to the British naval base at Bermuda, according to American passengers arriving here Monday on the steamship Bermuda from Bermuda.

The submarines, the passengers said, were seen from the shore off the port of St. George for the first time last Thursday, and the Leviathan came in Friday morning. In addition to the Leviathan and the submarines, the passengers added, a fleet of six or eight fast, light cruisers flying British and French flags, are now making Bermuda a base, the fleet having been increased since the news of the presence of a German raider in the Atlantic became known. British naval records show that the Leviathan was built in 1901, is heavily armored and equipped with two 9-inch guns in addition to two 18-inch submerged torpedo tubes. Her speed is rated at 23 knots.

A TRIBUTE TO MAJOR THE REV. ARTHUR H. MCGREER

CHAPLAIN TO THE CANADIAN CORPS AT HEADQUARTERS, FRANCE.

The following letter will speak for itself. Our townspeople rejoiced some time ago on learning that the "Padre" herein mentioned now wears the Military Cross. It will be remembered that with our troops on active service, there are no denominations, but there is religion in its highest sense, and that all the clergy, of whatever creed, are known simply as "Padre."

3rd Oct., 1916

Letter from an O.C. to Major Leonard.

On April 25th—Last year one of my officers and one of my men, who had been wounded, refused to go to hospital so I hustled them off in a postroom wagon, tied them down and drove them into—. There I had the first hot meal I had had for three days, and it was from a Soup Kitchen on a motor car, which was marked, "Presented by Major R. W. Leonard." This car is one of the most valuable adjuncts of the 1st Canadian Division, and was being worked twenty-four hours a day.

I wish you could have seen how the poor fellows were enjoying their hot soup and food. Since that time I have often seen the "bus" at some of the dressing stations, and I cannot speak in too high terms of the service it has done. It is the only one I have seen out here and I understand that it is still attached to one of the Field Ambulances. When the Canadian Divisional Engineers left Valenciennes, two years ago on the first of this month, we had attached to us as Chaplains an English Church Padre from Montreal. While with us made such remarkable headway in getting us "chuck" full of religion that he was taken away from the engineers and attached to the Medical men—3rd Field Ambulance. The Padre is the man who instituted the Minstrel Show, which did so much to cheer up the men of the 1st and 2nd Divisions last fall and winter. On his own he borrowed some money and bought some large moving picture machines, rented a hall for several months, and until we moved from that district, he gave an excellent entertainment twice daily, securing his performers from the different units in the Canadian Corps, at times also bringing in outside talent. A nominal admission was charged, but he had such large audiences that soon he was able to pay back the money he had borrowed, and had a surplus. He then secured some large tents and when we moved to other districts the cinema shows were continued. We all consider this Padre about the most indispensable man in the Corps.

His latest activity has been along the lines of coffee stalls a very short distance behind the front line, where he provides hot tea and coffee and sandwiches to the men coming to and from the trenches, working parties, etc. The other day I had a party of sappers building and sand-lugging a new coffee stall and mentioned to him that he should get hold of your Soup Kitchen. He said it was still continuing to do its good work with Field Ambulances, but that he could increase the efficiency of his work in the coffee stall 100 per cent. if he had a kitchen similar to the one you presented to the 1st Division.

If you could see the way the Padre's coffee stall has been patronized during the wet weather you would appreciate the great value of adjuncts of this kind, which unfortunately are not laid down in any establishment. I have had the Padre write me a letter, which I enclose herewith to show you how much your soup kitchen was appreciated in the latter part of April and the early part of May last year.

P.S.—Since dictating the above I have been up in the forward area and there met this same Padre in a rather heavily shelled part, doling out cigarettes to the poor mud-covered, wounded beggars as they came down the road. They could heap all the honours ever invented on this man with the sunny smile, and then they would fall away short of giving him his due. The Padre never sleeps but every minute seems to be doing some valuable work which everyone else has overlooked.

Should not Lennox and Addington be proud and thankful for such a son? and grateful that he offered himself and such priceless services as he alone can render his fellow-men, in the service of his King and Country?

VISIT OF THE "FRIENDSHIP CLUB"

A delightful surprise awaited the members of the Chapter and Committee with their friends when the members of the above Club came to our work-meeting on Thursday afternoon, the 18th January, to bring us a subscription for our work, which they had earned themselves. On this occasion the young treasurer, Miss Edith Cottle, accompanied by the little president, Miss Helen Davy, presented to the Regent, Mrs. Harshaw, in a very sweet and charming manner, a cheque for $15.00, which was greeted with much applause and many congratulations.

As the proposal for the raising of a fund to provide Major the Rev. A. H. McGreer with a Soup Kitchen to aid him in his valuable work just back of the front line in France had just been taken up the little girls were asked if they would like to make their donation the nucleus of the fund? They gladly consented. All were much pleased and touched with the thoughtful and practical generosity of these little women.

We are also much indebted to the young ladies of Mrs. A. McGregor's class of Daughters of the King, who have again recently made us a generous donation providing the cotton and rolling three dozen bandages for the French soldiers in the little hospital of Brittany, where so many hospital supplies of all sorts are so much needed. We thank Mrs. McGregor and these young ladies very sincerely for their interest and help.

A very generous donation was received last week from Miss Patterson for the Belgian Children's Fund, for which she has our sincere thanks.

The cabinet for fine china or antique silver, on which tickets are being sold, has, through the kindness of Mr. Graham, been placed in one of the windows of the Graham Co., Mr. Graham having tickets for sale. One of these tickets will feed a Belgian child for a day. See Mr. Graham and help on Sailors extend the arms and call the distance a fathom. A man standing with his back to the ground can stretch only about his height. He tries to measure a tree by standing around it his fathom will be more than five feet.

The normal pulse beats seventy-five times a minute, and normal respiration twenty times a minute.

The pace is called thirty because though few men can without take a hundred consecutive steps the same length. It is better to terminate the length of the regatta, or, rather, the number of steps required to cover a given distance naturally, than to attempt to keep an artificial pace of an artificial length. The average man takes thirty inches, 108 steps a mile, or three miles an hour. The fastest man marches 120 steps a minute, or a rate of 3.4 miles an hour, by rapid going and regular breathing. A ten minute halt would reduce the distance covered to 2.34 miles each hour.—Outing

LETTER FROM A NAPANEE BOY.

France, Jan. 6th, 1917

Dear Mother,—

Received your letter, the first I have had since I came to France.

I got a letter from Mrs. Richardson, and a parcel from the Sunday School, directed by Mr. Paul. I will have to thank him very much for his consider- ation by letter, but I wish you would see him, and in my name thank him personally.

Your letter was dated Dec. 5th, so there will be a lot of back letters and parcels to come yet.

You see we have been on the move so much that they don't seem to be able to keep track of us. I suppose you got the pictures I sent of London. They will be interesting, and I wish you would save them until I come back. I don't know where James Stevens is but I am going to get his address from one of the boys.

I am glad you get the money from me for I could squander it all over here. You see I get a franc, or 20c, a day, or 15 franc twice a month. I have been up to the front line and am now in reserve.

Well, I have had a few letters from my friend, but she is in England, and I am in France where the guns roar and the shrapnel fly around. The mail has just come in and I received a letter from you and Gladys, and Miss Ivy Goldsack and Miss Jennie Dickens, and a parcel from the Daughters of the Empire in Napanee. I am one of the lucky boys, but I would like it better if your parcels would reach me soon. I am glad you sent my picture to grandma, as she has none. Oh, say mother, I wish you could have seen the bunch to-day, with six days' mud and clay on them. Of course I was with them, and I tell you a wash was a relief. Mother, I thank you very much for the $1.00 bill, as I was broke. I thank you very much for your trust, and I will try to fill the bill to the letter. My ink is done so I will have to close.

Here's love and best wishes from your loving son, Chester.

P.S.—Tell Gladys this paper I am writing on is out of a pad that Miss Etta Thompson sent me, and thank her very much for it. Oh yes, mother, I have a testament, the one Gladys gave me. I read it every chance I get.

Dear Father,—

Do you know I have found out that there is no place like home, and I can tell you I miss you very much. I hope you will have a steady job for a good while to come. Give my love to Pheobe and Ed., and Uncle Jim, and Aunt Fessie. I wish I could see Sam. Gallagher over here in the mud. I fancy I hear him say, "What has this got to do with the war." He would find out (ha! ha!). I have had to borrow a pen to finish. I think when I get back I will be a bigger man than you, but not a better.

Well, I think I will close with love from your loving son,

FOILING THE FLAMES.

Methods of Fire Prevention Should Be Studied In Every Home.

In bygone days the function of the chief of a fire department was merely to put out fires. Nowadays his duty is to prevent them.

Originally a fireman's work was de- fensive. Now it is also offensive. It attacks the cause.

Most fires are preventable. Individ- ual carelessness is the chief cause. Education of the public—even involv- ing punitive measures—is the remedy.

The simplest method of getting rid of fires is first to get rid of things that burn. "Cleanup days" are no novelty. They have undoubtedly reduced the fire loss ratio, but the very fact that there is need of an annual cleanup is proof that the public has not yet been rightly educated. Once a year is not often enough to wash the public's face or to brush its teeth and clean out its ears. This should be a daily task. Waste, rubbish and combustibles should not be allowed to accumulate.

The public education must go fur- ther. It should be carried into the home and should begin with the child.

A periodical lecture or talk given at least once a month in the public schools by a fireman in uniform would strike at the very root of the fire prob- lem. An official in uniform always im- presses a child, and his remarks and directions would carry the weight of authority. These lectures if illustrat- ed by charts and diagrams would be more effective and would graphically present to the child mind not only the dangers of fire, but the methods of prevention and quick extinguishment.

In some cities juvenile police depart- ments have been established with var- ied success, but a juvenile fire depart- ment, whether organized or merely ex- isting in the educational equipment of children to prevent and extinguish fires, would be one of the most ad- vanced steps taken toward the con- servation of human life and property. —Insurance Press.

Mortified.

"I never was so mortified in my life."

"What's the matter now?"

"You know that little gown I bought for $16.50 that looked as though it must have cost four times that and was so becoming to me? I never dreamed any one would guess its price or where I bought it."

"Well, did any one?"

"Yes. I wore it for the first time last night at a dinner dance, and there were just sixteen other women there with gowns exactly like it."

Douglas Jerrold In School.

Douglas Jerrold wrote "Black Eyed Susan" when he was twenty-one and contributed to Punch the immensely popular "Candle Lectures" not long af- terward. But at nine years of age young Jerrold had been scarcely able to read, and it was not until he was apprenticed to a printer after serving for some time as a midshipman at sea that he showed either desire or capacity for intellectual improvement.

OR FLETCHER'S
STORIA

Jan. 3rd, 1917.
Dear folks at Home: I am well at present, hope you are all well at home. It is raining here and very muddy, but good soldiers do not mind that. You have to be a man to be in the army. We are somewhere near the Aras front, billeted in an old French house with an old-fashioned fire place, and are having a fine time. Say, Mother, I think I will bring a French girl home with me if the Huns do not damage me up too badly. I suppose you are having real winter weather now, quite different here. They are ploughing and the grass is nice and green and the flowers are blooming outside. Well, how are all the folks around Selby? How is the Sunday School coming on? I hope good. Remember me to them all. If I live to get through this war I think I will take a trip around the world and see some more sights. Say Father, who do you suppose I met? Roy Car-scadden and two other fellows from Napanee. Roy and I slept together for three nights. I did not like to part with him. Well Mother, I would like to tell you more about the war, but not allowed. Did Davis come home for Xmas? I hope you had a fine time. I can't tell you much about my Xmas. Have a good dinner ready for me when I come for I will be very hungry and tired and will not want to work for a while. Received my Xmas Box O.K., and the cake, candy and desserts were so good. I was surprised and thank you very much. Well Father, Mother, if I do not come home you will know what became of me, for there is a war on for Liberty and Justice and I am going to do my bit, you bet.

With love to all.
From your loving son,
James.

EVOLUTION OF A SENATOR.

His Career Briefly Sketched From Baby Holding to Congress.

Prior to election a future United States senator is meek and lowly. He is not averse to holding babies or four acres, as the environment may demand, while campaigning for votes. One may safely slap him on the back without fear of rebuff. Before the last precinct is counted he seems to know his success, for the senatorial candidate stiffens, dons his black clothes and a fresh collar and begins to practice a dignified stride for future use on Pennsylvania avenue. Babies and jackpots have lost their alluring possibilities; no longer does he tolerate familiarity; he is as patronizing as a roaster who scratches worms for the hens and then eats them before his invited guests arrive.

Seated in a niche of the hall of congress the new senator feels as though he should peer through a microscope to make sure he is there, but confidential letters sent to the editor of the Jumpoff Breeze tell how he is preparing a bill advocating the irrigation of Sagebrush valley; also how he is worked to death by other senators asking favors of him. As a school for fiction writers the United States senate has all other correspondence schools lashed to the mast.

Many senators fail to receive just reward at the conclusion of their maiden voyage through the troubled congressional waters probably because the law is so strictly enforced against murder. —Harper's Weekly.

ONTARIO POLITICS.

Although W. T. Allen, Conservative defeated Isaac Scott, Liberal, in the West Simcoe bye-election for the Ontario Legislature, the result, far from being discouraging to the Liberals, within it many elements of encouragement.

In the first place the Conservatives had the smallest majority, in this traditionally Tory stronghold, that they have had in nineteen years.

In the second place, from the provincial aspect, it is the sixth consecutive bye-election in which the Ontario government's majority has been reduced. In fact the government has lost ground in every single bye-election since the general election of 1914.

The average opposition gain in all the six bye-elections is 1547. This is three times the average gain needed to elect the government out of power at the next election.

The Hearst government has been slipping for a couple of years and the West Simcoe bye-election has done nothing to stop the slipping.

LIBERALS AND PROHIBITION.

In one of the greatest speeches that Newton Rowell has given for a long time, the one in Belmont Hall in Toronto recently, he re-emphasized in the most emphatic terms the position of the Liberal Party in the province on the Temperance question. He told the real facts of the situation and showed that it was thanks to the Liberal Party that prohibition is in effect here to-day. "The Ontario Temperance Act," he said, "would not have been upon the statute books to-night, and the people would not have been reaping the benefit of it, had it not been for the effort and work of the Liberal Party. If you have Prohibition tonight, every man who thanks God for it should recognize that it would not have been in force but for the Liberal Party. And I want to go further, the course which the Liberal Party took in Ontario was one of the great inspirations to the leaders of the western provinces and resulted in the Temperance legislation on the statute books of those provinces."

Mr. Rowell explained that he was speaking on this subject because there appeared to be an effort on behalf of the government, to make the people believe that this measure was the measure of the government alone and that the party which he had the privilege of leading and of whose honor he was for the time being the custodian, was not wholeheartedly behind this measure. "I believe," he said "that in the interests of the Act itself and the interests of the cause of Temperance in Ontario and throughout Canada, it is of the utmost importance that we should remain united and that men of both political parties should work in hearty sympathy and co-operation for the advancement of measures of this kind."

As a specific example of Mr. Rowell's attitude to prohibition he declared that if Mr. Cane, the Liberal candidate in North West Toronto, had come out for a wine and beer license, he would have repudiated him on the spot just as Premier Hearst should have repudiated Mr. Norris, the Conservative candidate in South West Toronto bye-election, who did favor wine and beer licenses.

"This province at that time" said Mr. Rowell, "witnessed the humiliat-

SONGS OF THE FELINES.

Why Lions and Tigers Can Roar and Cats Pur and Mew.

One of the most interesting discoveries made lately is that of Sir Richard Owen that the lion roars, instead of purring, simply because the hyoid bone in his throat is loose.

In the cat this bone is stationary, so that the cat purrs and cannot roar. But in the lion and tiger the hyoid is loose, and therefore even when calling to their mates the larger members of the cat family roar. The roars of the jaguar and leopard are like "hoarse, barking coughs, an interval of about one second separating the expiratory efforts," says this observer. They may be easily reproduced or imitated by sawing a piece of thin board with a coarse toothed saw. The cheetah, however, calls with a decided mew, very much like that of the cat.

R. I. Pocock, superintendent of the London zoo, explains that those feline, or cat family, that have an elastic ligament between the ceratohyal and the upper elements of the suspensorium—lion, tiger, leopard, jaguar—roar, but never purr, while all the other species of the felidae, with normally constricted hyoids, purr, but never roar, and among these are the cheetah and puma.

DANCING IN ROUMANIA.

Peasants Make Merry on Sunday to Oil Their Joints For Monday.

The Roumanian peasants have a saying that they must dance on Sunday to keep the creak out of their bones on Monday. Most of the dances are at the public houses—dance halls under the blue sky, as it were—and young and old gather there. The old folk spend the day with the tippie, while the young ones dance. There is very little drinking on any other day of the week, and a tipsy man except on Sunday is seldom seen.

The dances are organized by the boys of the community. They arrange for the music, provide the refreshments and preside as masters of ceremony. When the girls reach a marriageable age and have been sufficiently instructed in the household arts they are allowed to attend these dances as participants. "She dances at the dance" is the peasant way of saying that a girl has made her debut and is eligible for matrimonial attentions.

The national dance of Roumania is a sort of cross between a jig and the game of ring-around-the-rose. All the dancers clasp hands and form a ring. They then begin a stepping, swaying motion that never moves them out of their original tracks, and to the music of the gypsy band they keep it up for hours.

ated Mr. Norris, the Conservative candidate in South West Toronto by-election, who did favor wine and beer licenses.

"This province at that time" said Mr. Rowell, "witnessed the humiliating spectacle of members of the government trifling with the measure which the Premier had declared to be a national necessity in war time,—cabinet ministers going before the electors and saying 'we will emasculate and destroy the bill which is a national necessity, for the sake of votes.' No adopted child ever received worse treatment from its foster parents."

"All I ask" said Mr. Rowell, "for my party and myself in this thing for which we have striven so long, is fair play and a square deal, and I have sufficient confidence in my fellow citizens of the province to know that they will play fair and are prepared to give us the square deal. When the Premier or any other Minister suggests that there are two Liberal parties, I tell them there is but one Liberal party and that Party stands squarely behind that Act. We have fought for the Temperance policy in the past. We stand just as strongly for it tonight, and we will see it through."

Bolt—Sweet Alice, whose hair was so brown, Who wept with delight when you gave her a smile

And trembled with fear at your frown?

Dr. Thomas Dunn English, its author, contributed his poem to the New York Mirror in 1843. It was a work of love, written without compensation, to oblige the editor, N. P. Willis, who had recently undertaken to put the paper on its feet.

The poem had a pathetic hit that attracted no little attention, but its fame did not come until later years. In 1848 Nelson Kneass, an actor, adapted the poem to an old German melody, and the air captivated the American people. Then the song crossed the water, achieved an equally great success in England and literally ran round the world.

It remained for George Du Maurier to immortalize "Ben Bolt" in the play "Trilby," where the gentle victim of Svengali sings the air so sweetly to Taffy the Laird and Little Billee.

The Doctor's Prescription.

Of historical interest is the emblem found on every prescription written by a physician, consisting of the letter R with a thin line across the tail at an acute angle. According to historians, it had its origin in the ancient custom of allowing the stars to dominate everyday incidents of life. The R thus marked is said to have been the emblem used by the ancients to designate the supremacy of Jupiter. Therefore it seems probable that some chemist of ancient days gave a prescription or a recipe to some patient and wrote upon it the emblem of the planet then in the ascendancy, which happened to be Jupiter. This emblem has come down to the present time and is always used. In a more modern sense it stands for a recipe, or an order or instruction to take something. Literally construed, recipe means, "take" or "take thou."

How to Learn to Write.

Putting words together is not writing; making fine sentences is not writing; elaborating striking plots is not writing. Of all the arts literature is the most exacting mistress. To write you must have lived, you must have suffered and know joy, you must be able to analyze people, to understand their motives, to love them.

Granted that you have learned something of the motives, the passions, the sorrows that rack us humans, then you must also have your medium in control. Words are like little creatures that march and fight and sing. They are like extra bands and brains. All the passions wait on them. Until you get this sense of the choiceness, the fragility, the power of words, you are not ready to transcribe your thoughts.

Tolstoy's Intensity.

Everything in Tolstoy's character, says a Russian writer, attains titanic proportions. "As a drinker he absorbed fantastic quantities of liquor. As a gambler he terrified his partners by the boldness of his play. As a soldier he advanced gayly to bastion four, the bastion of death at Sevastopol, and there he made dying men laugh at his witty sayings. He surpassed every one by his prodigious activity in sport as well as in literature."

which go over the oyster bed large rake arrangement drag ropes on the bottom of the oysters being thus forced from into the large nets fastened side of the rake.

The breeding powers of oysters are simply amazing, and it has been put that 1,000 full grown oysters produce 440,000,000 embryos in the course of a year. But of the time that only 421 individual oysters, for the mortality is enormous, millions being washed devoured by hungry fishes.

Dutchess County.

Dutchess county in New York named for the Duchess of York, the colonial assembly in 1683 divided the province into twelve counties. There was also a Dutchess, named in honor of the York, but that name has disappeared. There has been a discussion as to the proper "t" in the word, and it suggested that it has been because of some association Dutch settlers. But it should be remembered that the English "duchess" was spelled with a final "e" until the publication of Johnson's dictionary, in 1755, which changed its present spelling.

Mr. Disraeli's comment upon a trait of himself, "Is it not and so like?" exhibited a device not common with unflattering "Twenty Years In Parliament."

PAPER IN THE MAKING.

Pulp is the Basis of Most of the Modern Product.

Thousands of years ago paper was made by hand in little cradles. The paper is derived from papyrus, a plant from the leaves of which a pulp is made by pounding and macerating in water. Nowadays, of course, modern machinery is used to make paper and in this one item of manufacture America leads the world.

Writing paper is made mostly from wood for practically all other wood pulp is the basis. The softwood is spruce or poplar or hemlock. Poplar is used for fine book paper and spruce pulp goes into newsprint paper and bag paper.

Softwood pulp must, of course, be treated with a preparation containing dyes and other ingredients before it finally becomes paper. But by a careful process going on in the open spaces with clay passing through heavy steel rollers, the wood pulp takes on its appearance and texture of paper.

The product comes from the machine it is wound off on a reel, a large roll. A roll of newsprint weighs almost a ton and is handled by a derrick, says the Lumber Ledger.

ART KILLS OYSTERS.

Shells Are the Cleanest of All Our Sea Foods.

Following facts about oysters are given by a member of a family that has been connected with the oyster business for 300 years:

Average oyster before suitable consumption is between three and four years of age. They are undoubtedly the cleanest as well as the most delicious of fish, for it is a fact that if you eat in the way of dirt gets into the shell of any oyster it immediately

The young oyster is taken out in flat bottomed boats shoveled overboard in likely places and allowed to remain there till it is of a size and ready for catch. This is done by means of dredges, which are lowered over the oyster beds with a cable arrangement dragging from the bottom of the sea, the dredges being thus forced from the bed large nets fastened to the in-

BUY HIGH CLASS BONDS.

The Safety First Idea in the Investment of Money.

The bond buyer never fails. The speculator often does. The reason is that the bond buyer is an investor and the speculator a gambler. This is not to say that money is not made in speculation, for the records prove to the contrary.

No country in the world offers better or safer opportunities for investment in well secured, first class negotiable bonds — always commanding a ready market — than the United States.

FAME IN A FEW WORDS.

Authors Who Are Now Known Only by a Single Work or Passage.

Philip James Bailey wrote "Festus" when he was twenty-three and lived to be eighty-six without adding appreciably to his early laurels. His "Festus" was compared by enthusiastic admirers to the works of Shakespeare and Goethe. No one reads "Festus" now, but its memory survives in one familiar quotation, a one time favorite for use in autograph albums:

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart throbs.
He most lives
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best.

HER GIFT OF MIMICRY.

Cissie Loftus Could Imitate Irving and Bernhardt Equally Well.

Walter Prichard Eaton in the American Magazine says in an article about famous mimics:

"In the days when Cissie Loftus was delighting vaudeville audiences with her imitations she used to give an imitation of Lillian Russell. Miss Russell countered by giving an imitation of Miss Loftus' imitation of her. But to an artist like Miss Loftus that presented no difficulties. She merely came back with an imitation of Miss Russell's imitation of her imitation of Miss Russell! The fair Lillian, thereupon retired from an unequal contest.

"Cissie' Loftus could imitate anybody. The present writer once heard her in the course of a casual conversation imitate most thrillingly Sir Henry Irving in a blank verse death scene.
 Then an imaginary curtain descended, and you heard Sir Henry, in a totally different voice (no less unmistakably his), inquiring in very Saxon prose, where the deuce were the red lights?"

"Standing on the stage of a theater, without change of costume, with the flicker of a smile on her rather wistful face, she would range from Sarah Bernhardt to Ethel Barrymore, so that you almost gasped at the uncanny cleverness of it, and if you shut your eyes you could hardly believe that the actual persons were not present.

"Hers of course was an extraordinary gift of mimicry, and it brought her in $1,000 a week, much more probably than she could command as an actress."

Bailey is very far from being the only author to live in men's minds by virtue of a single line, stanza or passage. It is a narrow margin by which to escape oblivion, but it serves. True, it is not the writer himself that is remembered, but as long as some spark from his brain still glimmers he is not totally dead. It may be a line from a song. "Meet me by moonlight alone" and "Don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt?" are repeated as catchwords by thousands who never heard of J.
 Augustus Wade or Thomas Dunn English. Very often, however, the lines that survive are of high literary value.

Theodore O'Hara, soldier of fortune, wrote:

On fame's eternal camping ground
 Their silent tents are spread,
 And glory guards with solemn round
 The bivouac of the dead.

By these four lines he won for himself admission to the eternal camping ground of poetry.

William Knox, a Scotch versifier (1789-1825), owes his fragmentary survival not so much to any great poetic merit in his mortuary couplets as to the indorsement of Abraham Lincoln, who loved to repeat:

Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?
 I see a fast flitting meteor, a fast flying cloud,
 A flash of the lightning, a break of the wave,
 He passes from life to rest in the grave.

SAVAGE DISCIPLINE.

The Way Unruly Indian Boys Were Punished in Former Days.

My grandmother had twelve children, and one uncle undertook to teach me the art of worship. He used to lead me to the sandbanks of the Missouri river, where he would set fire to a pile of driftwood, and then, taking me by the hand, sing sacred songs to the fire and river. In the meantime he threw into them offerings of tobacco, red feathers, and sometimes oak twigs. I never knew the meaning of these offerings, but I always felt that some living thing actuated both the fire and the river.

Another uncle came to visit us periodically, and every time he came my brother or I suffered at his hands.
 Sometimes he would rush to the spring, carrying me horizontally under his arm and would plunge my head into the water until I almost suffocated.

His common form of discipline was

THIS BIRD LIVES ON FISH.

And He Doesn't Build a Nest, but Lives in a Sand Tunnel.

The belted kingfisher has a great taste for fish. Every day is Friday with him, because no matter how hungry he gets, he will eat nothing except fish. Wherever there are creeks, rivers, ponds or lakes the kingfishers are to be found.

His principal business in life seems to be diving into the water for fish.
 From his perch on a dead branch or as he hovers over the water this unusual bird spies a small fish. With a swoop and a splash and a dive he goes into the water and is out as quickly with the fish firmly held in his stout beak.
 As he emerges from the water a quick shake of the body sends the water flying from his oily feathers, and he is dry in short order. The fish is tossed into the air, caught again in the beak and swallowed head first.

Unlike most other birds, the kingfisher does not build his nest in trees, but seeks a sand bank, in which he digs a tunnel several feet straight in.
 At the far end a little room is hollowed out, and there on the sand the glossy eggs are laid.

The belted kingfisher is recognized by his fluffy crown and his breast band.
 The male has a blue-gray breast band, back and sides, while the female has chestnut colored sides and breast band in addition to a gray breast band.—Ex-

PROLOGUE.

After a lapse of a very few years, lo, here is a story about a Prince of Graustark who is none other than the son of Princess Yetive, the heroine of "Granstark." He is a full grown man, very much full grown, and very much of a man. Moreover, there is a beautiful girl in the offing, whose relation to Beverly of Graustark is that of daughter to mother; also there is a very shrewd, forceful, powerful American multimillionaire with a brilliant and lovely daughter. Now, given these ingredients, so to speak, and the reader may trust McCutcheon to mix them up to give them just the right flavor, to cook them to just the right turn and to serve a story piping hot, which will give as many million hours of thorough enjoyment as "Granstark" and "Beverly of Gran-can, thereby establishing a precedent behind which no constitutional obstacle could thrive, and had lived very happily with the gentleman in spite of the critics.

It appears that the prince after leisurely crossing the continent on his way around the world had come to the Truxton Kings for a long promised and much desired visit, the duration of which depended to some extent on his own inclinations and not a little on the outcome of the war talk that affected two great European nations—Russia and Austria. Mr. Blithers was in a position to know that the little principality over which the young man reigned was bound to be drawn into the cataclysm not as a belligerent or an ally, but in the matter of a loan that inconveniently expired within the year and which would hardly be renewed by Russia with the prospect of vast expenditures of war threatening her treasury. The loan undoubtedly would be called, and Graustark was not in a position to pay out of her own slender resources, two years of famine having fallen upon the people at a time when prosperity was most to be desired.

It was the private opinion of Mr. Blithers that the young prince and the trusted agents who accompanied him on his journey were in the United States solely for the purpose of arranging a loan through sources that could only be reached by personal appeal.

But all this is beside the question. The young Prince of Graustark was enjoying American hospitality, and no matter what he owed to Russia, America owed to him its most punctillious consideration.

The main point is that the prince was now rusticated within what you might call a stone's throw of the capacious and lordly country residence of Mr. Blithers; moreover, he was an uncommonly attractive chap, with a laugh that was so charged with heartiness that it didn't seem possible that he could have a drop of royal blood in his vigorous young body. And the perfectly ridiculous part of the whole situation was that Mr. and Mrs. King lived in a modest, vine covered little house that could have been lost in the servants' quarters at Blitherwood. Especially aggravating, too, was the Kings' attitude. They were really nobodies, so to speak, and yet they blithely called their royal guest "Bobby" and allowed him to fetch and carry for their women folk quite as if he were an ordinary whippersnapper up from the city to spend the week end.

The remark with which Mr. Blithers introduces this chapter was in response to an oft repeated declaration made by his wife. Mrs. Blithers merely had stated—but over and over again—that money couldn't buy everything in the world, referring directly to social eminence and indirectly to their secret said he after a moment of indecision. Something told him that he really ought to refrain from talking about the cost of things, even in the bosom of his family. He had heard that only vulgarians speak of their possessions. "Now, there's no reason in the world why we shouldn't consider his offer. He"—

"Offer?" she cried, aghast. "He has made no offer, Will. He doesn't even know that Maud is in existence. How can you say such a thing?"

"I was merely looking ahead, that's all. My motto is 'Look ahead.' You know it as well as I do. Where would I be today if I hadn't looked ahead and seen what was going to happen before the other fellow had his eyes open? Will you tell me that? Where, I say? What's more, where would I be now if I hadn't looked ahead and seen what a marriage with the daughter of Judge Morton would mean to me in the long run?" He felt that he had uttered a very pretty and convincing compliment. "I never made a bad bargain in my life, Lou, and it wasn't guesswork when I married you. You, my dear old girl, you were the solid foundation on which I"—

"I know," she said wearily. "You've said it a thousand times—the foundation on which I built my temple of posterity—yes, I know, Will. But I am still unalterably opposed to making ourselves ridiculous in the eyes of Mr. and Mrs. King."

"Ridiculous? I don't understand you?"

"Well, you will after you think it over," she said quietly, and he scowled in positive perplexity.

"Don't you think he'd be a good match for Maud?" he asked, after many minutes. He felt that he had thought it over.

"Are you thinking of kidnaping him, Will?" she demanded.

"Certainly not! But all you've got to do is to say that he's the man for Maud and I'll—I'll do the rest. That's the kind of a man I am, Lou. You say you don't want Count What's-His-Name—that is, you don't want him as much as you did—and you do say that it would be the grandest thing in the world if Maud could be the Princess of Groostick"—

"Graustark, Will."

"That's what I said. Well, if you want her to be the Princess of THAT I'll see that she is, provided this fellow is a gentleman and worthy of her. The only prince I ever knew was a rascal, and I'm going to be careful about this one. You remember that measly"—

"There is no question about Prince Robin," said she sharply.

"I suppose the only question is, How much will he want?"

"You mean—settlement?"

"Sure."

"Have you no romance in your soul, William Blithers?"

"I never believed in fairy stories," said he grimly. "And, what's more, I don't take any stock in cheap novels in which American heroes go about marrying into royal families and all that sort of rot. It isn't done, Lou. If you want to marry into a royal family you've got to put up the coin."

"Prince Robin's mother, the poor Princess Yetive, married an American for love, let me remind you."

"Umph! Where is this Groostock, anyway."

ways to be "Aunt Loraine."

As a very small boy he had visits to the home land of his father but after the death of his father, a valuable little person was guineas jealously by his subjects that had he set foot beyond the borders of Graustark, except on two well arranged occasions of great public ceremony at the courts of Vice St. Petersburg, and a secret journey to London when he was seven years old, appears that he was determined to win a great football match. On these occasions he was attended by watchful members of the cabinet certain military units in the form of insignificant standing a matter of fact, he witnessed a ball match from the ordinary surrounded by thousands of waiting Britons, but carefully watched between two generals of his own and flanked by a minister of the treasury and the minister of war, all of whom were slyly bored by the contest and or less appalled by his unregimented slouch. He had insisted on going to the match incognito, to enjoy it for a worth to the real spectators—those who sit or stand where the compromise is not unlike that applied to sardines.

The regency expired when twenty years of age, and he ruled in fact of himself as with the half million subjects who looked patiently for the great day to see him crowned and glorified was their prince, and they loved him well.

Mr. Blithers was very close to the truth when he said to himself (remember) that the financial situation in the far off principality was that could be desired. It is a fact that Graustark was in Russia's debt of some 20,000,000,000 gave her $30,000,000, in other words—the day of reckoning was very near hand. The loan was for a period of twelve years and had been contrary to the advice of John American financier, who had been interested in the welfare

CHAPTER I.

Matrimony Is Discussed.

"M Y dear," said Mr. Blithers, with decision, "you can't tell me."

"I know I can't," said his wife, quite as positively. She knew when she could tell him a thing and when she couldn't.

It was quite impossible to impart information to Mr. Blithers when he had the tips of two resolute fingers embedded in his ears. Mrs. Blithers had lived with her husband, more or less, for twenty-five years, and she knew him like a book. He was a forceful person who would have his own way, even though he had to put his fingers in his ears to get it. Moreover, when he called her "my dear" instead of the customary Lou it was a sign of supreme obstinacy on his part and could not by any stretch of the imagination be regarded as an indication of placid affection. He always said "my dear" at the top of his voice and with a great deal of irascibility.

Mr. William W. Blithers was a self-made man who had begun his career by shouting lustily at a team of mules in a railway construction camp. Other drivers had tried to improve on his vocabulary, but even the mules were able to appreciate the futility of such an ambition, and later on, when he came to own two or three railroads, to say nothing of a few mines and a steam yacht, his ability to drive men was even more noteworthy than his power over the jackasses had been.

Mr. and Mrs. Blithers had been discussing royalty. Up to the previous week they had restricted themselves to the nobility, but as an event of unexampled importance had transpired in the interim they now felt that it would be the rankest stupidity to consider any one short of a prince royal in picking out a suitable husband—or, more properly speaking, consort—for their only daughter, Maud Applegate Blithers, aged twenty.

Mrs. Blithers long ago had convinced her husband that no ordinary human being of the male persuasion was worthy of their daughter's hand and had set her heart on having nothing meaner than a duke on the family roll—Blithers alluded to it for awhile as the payroll—with the choice lying between England and Italy.

But now, just as they were on the point of accepting in lieu of a duke an exceptionally promising count, the aforesaid event conspired to completely upset all of their plans—or notions, so to speak. It was nothing less than the arrival in America of an eligible prince of the royal blood, a ruling prince at that. As a matter of fact, he had not only arrived in America, but upon the vast estate adjoining their own in the Catskills.

Peculiarly promising to their hopes was the indisputable fact that the prince's mother had married an Ameri-ambition to capture a prince of the royal blood for their daughter Maud. She had prefaced this opinion, however, with the exceedingly irritating insinuation that Mr. Blithers was not in his right mind when he proposed inviting the prince to spend a few weeks at Blithewood, provided the young man could cut short his visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. King, who, he had asseverated, were in no position to entertain royalty as royalty was in the habit of being entertained.

Long experience had taught Mr. Blithers to read the lip and eye language with some degree of certainty, so by watching his wife's indignant face closely he was able to tell when she was succumbing to reason. He was a burly, domineering person who reasoned for every one within range of his voice, and it was only when his wife became coldly sarcastic that he closed his ears and boomed his solutions into her very teeth, so to say, joyfully overwhelming her with facts which it were futile for her to attempt to deny. He was aware quite as much so as if he had heard the words that she was now saying:

"Well, there is absolutely no use arguing with you, Will. Have it your way if it pleases you."

Eying her with some uneasiness, he cautiously inserted his thumbs in the armholes of his brocaded waistcoat and proclaimed:

"As I said before, Lou, there isn't a foreign nobleman, from the emperor down, who is above grabbing a few million dollars. They're all hard up."

"We were speaking of Prince Robin," remarked his wife, with a slight shudder. Mrs. Blithers came of better stock than her husband. His gaucheries frequently set her teeth on edge. She was born in Providence and sometimes mentioned the occurrence when particularly desirous of squelching him, not unkindly perhaps, but by way of making him realize that their daughter had good blood in her veins. Mr. Blithers had heard in a roundabout way that he first saw the light of day in Jersey City, although after he became famous Newark claimed him. He did not bother about the matter.

"Well, he's like all the rest of them," you've got to put up the count.

"Prince Robin's mother, the poor Princess Yette, married an American for love, let me remind you."

"Umph! Where is this Groostock, anyway?"

"Somewhere east of the setting sun," she quoted. "You must learn how to pronounce it."

"I never was good at foreign languages. By the way, where is Maud this afternoon?"

"Motoring."

He waited for additional information. It was not vouchsafed, so he demanded somewhat fearfully:

"Who with?"

"Young Scoville."

He scowled. "He's a loafer, Lou. No good in the world. I don't like the way you let"—

"He is of a very good family, my dear. I"—

"Is he—or—in love with her?"

"Certainly. Why not? Isn't every one she meets in love with her?"

"I—I suppose so," he admitted sheepishly. His face brightened. "And there's no reason why this prince shouldn't fall heels over head, is there? Well, there you are! That will make a difference in the settlement, believe me, a difference of a couple of millions at least!"

She arose abruptly. "You are positively disgusting, Will. Can't you think of anything but?"

"Say, ain't that Maudie coming up the drive now? Sure it is! By gracious, did you ever see anything to beat her? She's got 'em all beat a mile when it comes to looks and style and— Oh, by the way," lowering his voice to a hoarse, confidential whisper, "I wouldn't say anything to her about the marriage just yet if I were you. I want to look him over first."

Prince Robin of Graustark was as good looking a chap as one would see in a week's journey. Little would one suspect him of being the descendant of a long and distinguished line of princes save for the unmistakable though indefinable something in his eye that exacted rather than invited the homage of his fellow man. His laugh was a free and merry one, his spirits as effervescent as wine, his manner blithe and boyish, yet beneath all this fair and guileless exposition of carelessness lay the sober integrity of caste.

His mother, the beautiful, gracious and lamented Princess Yette, set all royal circles by the ears when she married the American, Lorry, back in the nineties. A special act of the ministry had legalized this union, and the son of the American was not deprived of his right to succeed to the throne which his forbears had occupied for centuries. From his mother he had inherited the right of kings, from his father the spirit of freedom; from his mother the power of majesty, from his father the power to see beyond that majesty. When little more than a babe in arms, he was orphaned, and the affairs of state fell upon the shoulders of three loyal and devoted men who served as regents until he became of age.

He was seven when the great revolt headed by Count Marlanx came so near to overthrowing the government, and he behaved like the prince that he was. It was during those perilous times that he came to know the gallant Truxton King, in whose home he was now a happy guest. But before Truxton King he knew the lovely girl who became the wife of that devoted adventurer and who, to him, was al-

The minister of finance had long recovered from the delusion that it would be easy to get money from either England or pay the Russians, there was prospect of a renewal by the emperor for a short period at a high interest. tionally capable person when it came to the checking of luggage and the dividing of railway timetables. He had been a guide for a tourist agency. It was quite impossible to miss a train that Hobbs suspected of being the right one.

Prince Robin came unheralded and traversed the breadth of the continent without attracting more than the attention that is bestowed upon good looking young men. Like his mother, nearly a quarter of a century before, he traveled incognito. But where she had used the somewhat emphatic name of Gungensloeker he was known to the hotel registers as "Mr. R. Schmidt and servant."

There was romance in the eager young soul of Prince Robin. He revealed in the love story of his parents. The beautiful Princess Yette first saw Grenfell Lorry in an express train going eastward from Denver. Their wonderful romance was born, so to speak, in a Pullman compartment car, and it thrived so splendidly that it almost upset a dynasty, for never in all of nine centuries—had a ruler of Graustark stooped to marriage with a commoner.

And so when the farsighted ministry and house of nobles in Graustark set about to select a wife for their young ruler they made overtures to the Prince of Dawsbergen, whose domain adjoined Graustark on the south. The Crown Princess of Dawsbergen, then but fifteen, was the unanimous choice of the amiable matchmakers in secret conclave. This was when Robin was seventeen and just over being fatuously in love with his middle aged instructress in French.

The Prince of Dawsbergen dispatched an embassy of noblemen to assure his neighbor that the match would be highly acceptable to him and that in proper season the betrothal might be announced. But alack! both courts overlooked the fact that there was independent American blood in the two young people. Neither the Prince of Graustark nor the Crown Princess of Dawsbergen—whose mother was a Miss Beverly Calhoun of Virginia—was disposed to listen to the voice of expediency; in fact, at a safe distance of three or four hundred miles the youngsters figuratively turned up their noses at each other and frankly confessed that they hated each other and wouldn't be bullied into getting married, no matter what anybody said, or something of the sort.

"Suppose I'm going to say I'll marry a girl I've never seen?" demanded seventeen-year-old Robin, full of wrath. "Not I, my lords. I'm going to look about a bit, if you don't mind. The world is full of girls. I'll marry the one I happen to want or I'll not marry at all."

"But, highness," they protested, "you must listen to reason. There must be a successor to the throne of Graustark. You would not have the name die with you. The young princess is—"

"Is fifteen, you say," he interrupted loftily. "Come around in ten years and we'll talk it over again. But I'm not going to pledge myself to marry a child in short frocks, name or no name. Is she pretty?"

The lords did not know. They had not seen the young lady.

"If she is pretty you'd be sure to know it, my lords, so we'll assume she isn't. I saw her when she was three years married before you are out of short frocks, my dear," said Prince Dantan stiffly. "But a betrothal is quite another thing. It is customary to arrange these marriages years before—"

"Is Prince Robin in love with me?"

"I—ahem—that's a very silly question. He hasn't seen you since you were a baby. But he will be in love with you, never fear."

"He may be in love with some one else, for all we know, so where do I come in?"

"Come in?" gasped her father.

"She's part American, dear," explained the mother with her prettiest smile.

"Besides," said the crown princess, with finality, "I'm not even going to be engaged to a man I've never seen. And if you insist, I'll run away as sure as anything."

And so the matter rested. Five years have passed since the initial overtures were made by the two courts, and although several sly attempts were made to bring the young people to a proper understanding of their case they aroused nothing more than scornful laughter on the part of the principals.

And no one saw the portentous shadow cast by the slim daughter of William W. Blithers, for the simple reason that neither Graustark nor Dawsbergen knew that it existed. They lived in serene ignorance of the fact that God, while he was about it, put Maud Applegate Blithers into the world on precisely the same day that the crown princess of Dawsbergen first saw the light of day.

On the twenty-second anniversary of his birth Prince Robin fared forth in quest of love and romance, not without hope of adventure, for he was a valorous chap with the heritage of warriors in his veins. Said he to himself in dreamy contemplation of the long journey ahead of him: "I will traverse the great highways that my mother trod, and I will look for the Golden Girl sitting by the wayside. She must be there, and though it is a wide world, I am young and my eyes are sharp. I will find her sitting at the roadside eager for me to come, not housed in a gloomy castle surrounded by the spooks of a hundred ancestors. They who live in castles wed to hate, and they who wed at the roadside live to love. Fortune attend me! If love lies at the roadside waiting do not let me pass it by. All the princesses are not inside the castles. Some sit outside the gates and laugh with glee for love is their companion. So away I go, la, la! looking for the princes with the happy heart and the smiling lips! It is a wide world, but my eyes are sharp. I shall find my princess."

But, alas, for his fine young dream, he found no golden girl at the roadside nor anything that suggested romance. There were happy hearts and smiling lips, and all for him, it would appear, but he passed them by, for his eyes were sharp and his wits awake. And so at last he came to Gotham, his heart as free as the air he breathed, confessing that his quest had been in vain. History failed to repeat itself. His mother's romance would stand alone and shine without a flicker to the end of time. There could be no counterpart.

"Well, I had the fun of looking," he philosophized (to himself, for no man you needn't punch me. I'm awake, and to prove it he stretched his fine, young body in the ecstasy of realization.

That night he slept soundly in the Catskills.

Toward the end of his first week at Red Roof, the summer home of the Truxton Kings, the prince might have been found on the broad lawn late one afternoon playing tennis with his hostess, the lovely and vivacious "Aunt Loraine." To him Mrs. King would always be "Aunt Loraine," even as he would never be anything but Bobby to her.

She was several years under forty and as light and active as a young girl. Her smooth cheek glowed with the happiness and thrill of the sport, and he was hard put to hold his own against her, even though she insisted that he play his level best.

Truxton King, stalwart and lazy, lounged on the turf, umpiring the game, attended by two pretty young girls, a lieutenant in flannels and the ceremonious Count Quinnox, iron gray and gaunt faced battlemaster with the saber scars on his cheek and the bullet wound in his side.

"Good work, Rainie!" shouted the umpire as his wife safely placed the ball far out of her opponent's reach.

"Hi!" shouted Robin, turning on him with a scowl. "You're not supposed to cheer anybody, d'you understand? You're only an umpire."

"Outburst of excitement, kid," apologized the umpire complacently. "Couldn't help it. Forty thirty. Get busy."

"He called him 'kid,'" whispered one of the young girls to the other.

"Well, I heard the prince call Mr. King 'Truck' a little while ago," whispered the other.

"Isn't he good looking?" sighed the first one.

They were sisters, very young, and lived in the cottage across the road with their widowed mother. Their existence was quite unknown to Mr. and Mrs. Blithers, although the amiable Maud was rather nice to them. She had once picked them up in her automobile when she encountered them walking to the station. After that she called them by their Christian names and generously asked them to call her Maud. It might appear from this that Maud suffered somewhat from loneliness in the great house on the hill. The Welton girls had known Robin a scant three-quarters of an hour and were deeply in love with him. Fannie was eighteen and Nellie but little more than sixteen. He was their first prince.

"Whee-ee!" shrilled Mrs. King, going madly after a return that her opponent had lobbed over the net. She missed.

"Deuce," said her husband laconically. A servant was crossing the lawn with a tray of iced drinks. As he neared the recumbent group he paused irresolutely and allowed his gaze to shift toward the road below. Then he came on, and as he drew alongside the interested umpire he leaned over and spoke in a low tone of voice.

AN IMPORTANT LETTER FROM NIAGARA FALLS.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—"I was miserable, tired out and dragging around. My legs could scarcely support me. My husband had read about 'Favorite Prescription' and he got me to use it. I used four bottles and the results were surprising. I got stronger, was less nervous, my appetite improved and I felt like a new person. It is the best medicine for women I have ever heard of."

—Mrs. A. C. Brown, 39 Clifton Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont.

There is nothing that will bring comfort and renew hope to the invalid so surely as good news. When the vital forces are at a low ebb and everything seems useless, a ray of joy and assurance will stimulate the weary body to new effort and energy. A letter from a loved one has turned the tide in many a case of sickness.

Doctor Pierce, of 'the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., has good news for every suffering woman. Write him to-day and tell him your troubles, and he will send you just the right advice to restore you to health and bring back the roses to your cheeks, and without charge. His "Favorite Prescription" has been the rescue of thousands of suffering women. Many grateful patients have taken Dr. Pierce's advice.

Mothers, if your daughters are weak, lack ambition, are troubled with headaches, lassitude and are pale and sickly, Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is just what they need to surely bring the bloom of health to their cheeks and make them strong and healthy.

It is not a secret remedy because its ingredients are printed on wrapper. Sold in either tablet or liquid form.

Hoaxed the Naturalist.

One of the most remarkable books ever published is the "Lithographia Wirceburgensis," written by a Wurzburg naturalist named Behringer in 1726. Probably very few copies are in existence, as the author destroyed all that he could get possession of soon after the book appeared. He had been victimized by some practical jokers, who had made a great variety of artificial "fossils" and hidden them in a quarry, to which they then enticed the professor. Behringer was overjoyed by so rich a find and had no suspicion of the trick, although many of the fossils were of a very grotesque character. He took his treasures home, made elaborate drawings of them and wrote a minute description of each, as well as an exhaustive commentary filled with ingenious and plausible theories. When he had published the book the jokers confessed, and then, of course, the professor did his utmost to suppress the work.

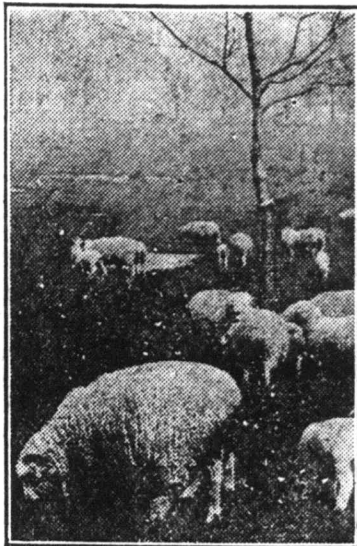

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

Few farms are so small that their owners cannot make live stock raising pay. Of course it cannot be done on truck farms of five or ten acres, but on the ordinary little places of twenty to forty acres which are becoming common in all parts of the country it is wise to raise a few animals.

Sheep and hogs grow into money fast and do not require much room. A small dairy is usually kept where mixed farming is carried on, and this is a great help in bringing forward a few hogs. Nearly everybody who has handled sheep lately has made money. This line of farming is well adapted to small places, and owners should study up on its advantages.

Winter lambs are ready for the market at two months of age and should then weigh between thirty-five and fifty pounds. The market price of winter lambs varies considerably, and it is desirable to have a special market for your product when possible. The live lambs usually sell for 15 to 20 cents per pound. But more can be realized by dressing them yourself and selling the dressed carcasses direct to some high class hotel or restaurant. The dressed price should run 50 per cent more than for live weight, and special markets can be found that will be glad to get them at from 35 to 40 cents per pound dressed. The pelts bring in enough money to pay for the dressing.

The profits from winter lambs greatly exceed those from any other kind of mutton production. The care and labor are greater during the time the lambs are growing, but the crop is disposed of within two months of birth and at a higher price than spring lambs that have taken care and attention for a much greater length of time. Winter lambing comes at a dull time for the owner, allowing him to carry on this part of the industry without taking any time from his regular duties in other lines. The ewes should produce enough wool to pay for their keep, and the lambs will not eat over $1 worth of feed during the short feeding period. They will sell for from $5 to $6 per head. Subtract the dollar's worth of food that they consume and you have a handsome return for your labor and investment.

This is only one simple feature that may be adopted with good results on any farm, large or small. The increasing demand for beef, pork, mutton and dairy products is quite in harmony with the movement for the conservation of soil fertility. That the time has come when the farmer can profitably feed his crops to stock there is little doubt. Our 100,000,000 people need meat and dairy products; our farms need the soil building crops and the resulting manure.

Farmers keeping stock should plan to raise the kinds of feed adapted to their needs. Where these feeds are grown rotation is unavoidable. Fortunately the crops best suited to the needs of stock are the very ones needed to return nitrogen and humus to the soil. By growing clover, alfalfa, grass and small grain crops in rotation and converting them into meat and dairy products it is possible to maintain or increase the fertility of the land. Stock farming provides for the growing of soil improving crops and feeding them out on the farm. In this way more than two-thirds of the plant food removed by the crops is returned to the soil in the form of farm manure.

Hence I advise the keeping of a few cows on the smallest of farms, and where there is a dairy of any size there should be hogs and beef animals. The calves born on the farm or at least a number of them should be raised for beef. By using a silo and raising both alfalfa and corn a great deal can be accomplished on a small tract of land.

CONTROL OF GRAIN

Pennsylvania Experiment Stationishes Some Timely Advice

C. H. Hadley, Jr., in chemistry extension at the Pennsylvania State college school of agriculture and experiment station considerable injury to grain especially to seed wheat, the best way to prevent such according to Mr. Hadley, is to the bin with carbon bisulphide chemical may usually be put in drug stores.

The following directions are outlined: The bin should be nearly air tight as possible. A pound of the sulphide is needed each 100 cubic feet of space and should be poured into or shallow dishes and placed over grain. The bin should then be tightly and allowed to fumigate twenty-four to thirty-six hours fumes will penetrate the grain and any insects present.

If the grain in the bin is it is a good plan to insert gas pipe, each with a stick down into the grain at various points. The stick is then withdrawn one-fourth pint of the carbon bisulphide poured into the pipe.

Carbon bisulphide is hence it is absolutely necessary to keep lighted cigars, lanterns away from the building in fumigation is taking place. (Do not inhale the fumes of the gas as they may cause sickness.)

Provided fumigation is not longer than forty-eight hours maturing quality of the grain be injured.

Some Beauty Don'ts.

Don't wear thin shoes and gossamer silk stockings in cold weather or Nature will take her revenge and you will have that pinched, chilled look that is so unbecoming. Don't economize in shoe leather. Don't take everything but exercise and then complain that you are growing stout. Exercise, even if the weather is bad, by preparing for it. A brisk walk on a cold day is a splendid complexion beautifier.

Don't fail to dry your hands thoroughly after washing if you wish to prevent them from getting chapped. Don't forget to wear a veil if your skin is susceptible to cold winds. Don't wear any heavy headgear. It is very hard on the hair. Don't let your rooms get too hot and never sit in a room that gives you chills. Have plenty of heat and keep a window open a little at the top.

A long walk will take away that tired, worn look so many women have.

For the young housekeeper a useful gift is a luncheon set, all in one piece, consisting of centerpiece and four plate dollies attached in the form of a Greek cross. This is embroidered in various designs and in either white or colors.

Fringe is in fashion, and it has invaded the realm of art needlework. Some of the new sofa cushions, which would make admirable gifts for the boy or girl away at college, are of heavy tan linen or crash embroidered in conventional designs in bright colors and finished with wide tan cotton fringe.

The autumn shops are full of interesting things to embroider and make. One is a baby's shoe bag, which would make a charming gift for a baby's first Christmas—a Christmas when the baby itself is not old enough to appreciate toys and when a gift that appeals to its mother is always acceptable. This bag is to hang on a door or wall. It is made of heavy white material, and there are two sections, one above the other, each containing pockets for three pairs of little boots or shoes. Embroidered letters across the top announce that it is for baby's shoes.

Food Values.

It is the sugar in a banana that gives its high food value. Sugar forms about 90 per cent of its bulk.

Fruit is valuable largely because of the acids it contains.

There is little fat in fruit, but apples contain more than any other sort.

The mineral salts in vegetables are of great value.

Milk contains no starch, but it does contain sugar. It is said that half a pound of dates and a glass of milk make a complete meal.

Nuts contain the food elements contained in meat.

Vegetables that grow underground, the tubers, have the highest nutritive value of any vegetables.

Soup of the clear broth order has little food value. Its value lies in the fact that it warms the stomach and therefore helps it to start the digestive process, and that, because of its bulk, it gives a feeling of satisfaction without the necessity of overburdening the stomach with concentrated foods.

WHEN YOU SERVE TEA.

Things to Do In Order to Be Really Hospitable.

Remember to add as a finishing touch to the tray or tea table a vase with a few flowers, a single rose, three or four asters or a yellow daffodil or so placed in a bud vase or held in place in a flat dish by a Japanese frog.

Always serve cream as well as lemon. Many persons do not enjoy tea without cream, and of course they will not be so frank as to tell you so when they see that the tea tray is not supplied with any.

Serve the cut sugar in the small half lumps. For a small cup of tea a large lump often proves too much, and it is always awkward to have to break a lump or to take a lump from the cup when it is half dissolved.

Take pains to see that the teapot and hot water jug are both well heated before pouring in the boiling water. By doing so the temperature of the boiling water will not be reduced in bringing the teapot and jug to level.

Remember to carry the pot to the boiling water and pour the water on the tea leaves while the water is actually boiling. Many persons wrongly feel that if the water has boiled it matters little whether or not it is still boiling when it is applied to the tea leaves.

Always serve sandwiches or toast in small portions. It is very awkward for the tea drinker to have to manage large portions. Bread and butter sandwiches should be of wafer thinness and should be cut in inch wide strips. A goodly supply should be on hand to make up for the smallness of the single pieces.

Guimpes For Children.

Guimpes are coming into vogue again for children. The practical wash fabrics are still to be among those popular with the smart little folk. Little plaited skirts seem to be used on practically every model, even on the smallest child. Some have the jackets slipped over the head or buttoned on the shoulders. Guimpes, which have often been made for little folk from their mothers' shirt waists, will be of much use to them this season, since practically all have the little white sleeves and yoke of lawn, linen, batiste, organdie and other sheer materials. For the fancy dresses georgette is used.

SHILOH
quickly stops coughs, cures colds, and heals the throat and lungs. 25 cents.

[Prepared by department of agriculture.]

A good depth for an indoor window box is about eight inches. The bottom of the box should be covered with stones and broken pottery for drainage. This should be covered with a layer of moss to prevent the soil from working down and clogging the drainage spaces. The drainage and moss should take up together about two inches. The greater the body of soil above the moss the more uniformly moist it may be kept. The soil should fail to fill the box by from one and one-half to two inches.

The indoor window box should be as long as the window is wide, and to get as much light as possible it should be level with the window sill. It may be placed either on brackets, a table or legs permanently fastened to it. A hole or holes should be provided in the bottom of the box, and a drip pan should be placed beneath to catch drainage water.

The top of the soil should be allowed to become dry occasionally. The results of watering should be closely observed and the supply regulated according to needs. In general it is better to water lightly and frequently than heavily and infrequently, although just the reverse is considered best when watering is done out of doors in summer.

Only plants of the same general character should be placed in window boxes since plants of different kinds require different treatment. Begonias are about the only plants that may be expected to flower in a window box. For the most part foliage alone must be depended upon as the contribution of the indoor plants to the attractiveness of the room. Among the plants which may be grown for foliage for window boxes are ferns, geraniums, Kenilworth ivy, smilax and aspidistra. The latter plant is especially valuable as a window box plant, as it will thrive in spite of considerable neglect, drought and dust.

An advantage in growing plants in pots instead of in boxes is that a larger variety can be grown since different treatment may be given. In addition to the plants already mentioned for growing in window boxes, palms, rubber plants and cacti may be grown in pots. It is advisable in growing all these plants to make use of regular florists' potting soil, made up of one part compost, one part good loam and one part sand. It is well to add one-twentieth part bone meal to the mixture.

About six o'clock Thursday morning the firemen were called out to extinguish a small fire in Ezra Pringle's blacksmith shop on the market. Very little damage was done, the firemen extinguishing the blaze with their chemical fire extinguishers. The origin of the fire was probably caused by a piece of hot iron falling between the cracks in the floor and smouldering until discovered by the smoke from it.

Was a Clever H. S. Pupil.

The sudden and unexpected death of Miss Agnes Scott came as a great shock to her many friends in Deseronto and vicinity. Miss Scott was a brilliant student at the High School and was there for the last time Tuesday, Jan. 9th, but complained of feeling ill. Shortly after she consulted her physician and was advised to undergo an operation for appendicitis at once. This was done and the operation was perfectly successful but the shock proved to be great and in spite of all that medical skill and careful nursing could accomplish, the patient passed away about noon on Sunday, Jan. 14th. The late Miss Scott was the daughter of Mr. Thos. F. Scott, of Roblin, Ont., and was about 19 at the time of her death. Deceased was greatly beloved by her schoolmates and teachers because of her sterling qualities and brilliant scholarship. At the Xmas examinations Miss Scott took a very high standing and would have qualified undoubtedly for a teacher next summer. It was long Miss Scott's great ambition to become a teacher and those who can best judge say that she would have made one of the best.

The Principal in referring to her death last week said while addressing the students of our High School that Miss Scott reached her ideal of a student more nearly than any other he had known in his experience of 25 years as a teacher. Her example and influence will live among those who knew her. The staff and students sent a wreath of flowers bearing the letters D.H.S. to the home of mourning as a loving tribute to the memory of one they will greatly miss. The funeral took place on Tuesday, Jan. 16th, at one o'clock, from the home of Miss McCullough. The procession was joined as it passed the High School by the staff and students and proceeded to the Methodist church where Rev. Mr. Tucker conducted the funeral service. All express the greatest sympathy for the sorrowing parents and relatives.—Deseronto Post.

The Late Mrs. Simon Haines.

It is with regret we are called to announce the death of a worthy citizen, in the person of Mrs. Simon Haines, Newburgh, who departed this life on Sunday, January 7th, aged eighty-nine years. Deceased was the daughter of Benjamin Files, who settled on a farm, where the village stands and where Mrs. Haines was born. She was the oldest pioneer resident of Newburgh. Eight years ago her daughter, Mrs. Clute, Winnipeg, came home to nurse her. She has been faithful and all that loving heart and tender hands could do this daughter did for her mother. Three months ago she was confined to her bed, from which she never rallied. Her funeral took place from her late residence on January 9th, thence to Newburgh cemetery.

Special Meetings.

Adjutant Duncan, of Salvation Army Headquarters Staff, Toronto, who will be remembered as one of the Harmonic Revivalists who visited Napanee several years ago and conducted several meetings which resulted in the conversion of over 100 people, is spending several days in town in the interests of the local work. The Adjutant is accompanied by Capt. Wilson, also of Headquarters Staff, Toronto. The Capt. is a survivor of the "Empress of Ireland" disaster and one of the few members of the Staff Band who were rescued at that time. These officers, assisted by Captains Thornton and Johnston of the Local Corps, will conduct services in the S. A. Hall, Mill St., on Thursday and Saturday, at 8 p.m., and on Sunday at 11, 3 and 7.30 p.m. In the Sunday evening meeting Capt. Wilson will, by special request, tell something of the wreck and his rescue.

It Was a Treat.

Those who attended the last meeting of the Historical Society in the expectation of hearing an intellectual treat, were not disappointed and those who did not go missed a rare opportunity. Dr. Reynar has the happy faculty of enlisting the sympathy of his hearers as soon as he rises to his feet to address them. The earnestness with which he enters into his subject is contagious and his beautiful English and charming manner hold them spell-bound to the conclusion. His subject was Alfred the Great, a subject, the mention of which, might not suggest to the ordinary mind a very interesting field for historical investigation but in the skilled hands of the doctor, it proved to be not only very instructive but intensely fascinating. It is to be hoped that the doctor can be induced to pay us another visit in the near future. The next meeting of the Society promises to be a most interesting one and will probably be held on February 16th. The Ven. Archdeacon Davidson, of Guelph, has promised to deliver his celebrated travalogue on Paris, illustrated by a very complete set of beautiful lantern slides. Further announcements will be made.

Napanee won by 25 shots Kingston won their round Eastern Hospital by 18 shots

The second round was completed, between the two sets noon winners.

Napanee and Kingston the same teams. The games followed 2 a.m., and resulted as follows: Kingston—G. Hanson (skip) M. Elliott (skip), 19.

Napanee—P. Killorin (skip) Taylor (skip), 15.

Kingston won the sub-group shots.

Napanee 10, Kingston 1.

In a hockey match played miles rink on Saturday night Napanee Juniors defeated the Engineers of Kingston, by 10-1. The play was very hard and Napanee had little difficulty scoring when they chose. presented a well balanced attack with practice and proper work would take a good team to 1 McNeill as Centre and S. Rover were the most effective Napanee. McNeill gave an exhibition of stickhandling seen around these parts for S. L. Spencer's rushes were very live, his fast skating being a standing feature. For the Napanee, Hughes as Rover was man. "Rolly" Graham, at showed some splendid bursts but this was offset by his poor play. Baird, the goal keeper, plenty of work to do and aside many hard shots.

The following is the line-up: Kingston—Goal, Baird; Graham and Savage; Rover Centre, Smythe; Wings, McJoyce.

Napanee—Goal Vanalstine Woodcock and Loucks; 1 Spencer; Centre, McNeill Blute and I. Spencer.

Referee—W. McLaughlin. Judge of Play—George V. Blute for Napanee worked made some sensational rushes and Loucks on the defence a hard pair to get past.

The Red Cross Society

The Society acknowledges with thanks the sum of $22.60, also a beautiful autograph quilt from Mrs. R. J. Dickinson's S. S. Class, "The Pines"; $1.00 from Miss Lizzie Saul; $15.00, a Friend; and a splendid donation of money from Mrs. C. B. B. Parks and Mrs. C. N. North, Hay Bay.

The Mite Box Collectors will call the last of the month.

Our treasurer wishes us to explain that in her annual report, the item "afternoon teas $462.09," includes $19 proceeds of a Valentine Tea given at our rooms by the Girls' Friendship Club, acknowledgment of which was also given special mention in the press of March 24th, 1916.

The little girls of this Club, whose ages range from eight to ten years, deserve great credit for the work they have done for the Red Cross, and we would be very sorry if acknowledgment of their kindness had not been made.

We are grateful to Miss Sadie Ham for a donation of $5.00 to be applied on the Belgian Relief Fund.

The hall will be open all day Saturday, tea being served in the afternoon.

STORMS CORNERS.

The recent storm has left the roads in a terrible condition. Old land marks say they never saw the roads in such a state. Still it has not stopped the popular mail courier, who has not missed one day. He drove through fields and cut fences.

The Misses Mildred and Edna Brown spent a few days in Carthage last week. Thomas Peters, an old resident, passed away on Sunday morning after a short illness.

Mrs. Bert, after spending a few months with Mrs. B. Davis, Violet, has returned home.

The "at home" held in the hall last evening was a decided success. The programme consisted of readings, recitations, solos, quartettes and trios. The proceeds amounted to $18.

Mr. and Mrs. Jordon, Campbellford, are spending a few days at H. Mill's. W. Bullock, Winnipeg, is at W. Forsythe's.

Miss T. Martin, Sydenham, at A. Snider's.

A Message to Young Farmers

It is your Duty either to ENLIST AND FIGHT or to PRODUCE MORE FOOD. This is a matter every young farmer must decide for himself.

But if you select to stay at home it is your duty to raise all the food you can. To help you in this endeavor, a four weeks' short course in

Practical Agriculture

will be held at

SELBY, January 23rd to February 16th, 1917.

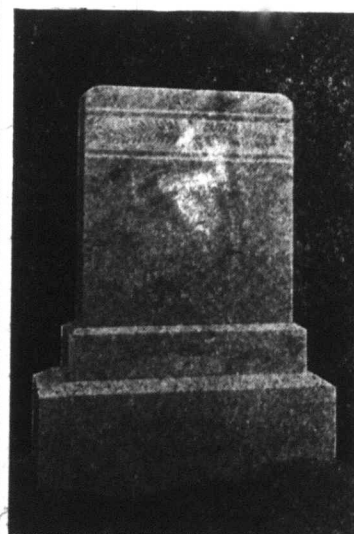

The course will deal with practical problems that confront the farmer in this County. It will make of you a better farmer. The young man who intends to farm as his life-work is entitled to an education the same as the doctor, lawyer, etc.

The Course is FREE. Send for a copy of circular giving outline of lectures and all particulars, or better, call in and talk it over with
